MESSAGE FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Welcome to the 8th annual edition of the Toronto Reel Asian International Film Festival, featuring five evenings and four days of fabulous films, videos, artist talks and of course, parties. Programmer Stephen Lan and the Reel Asian Screening Committee have spent months watching hundreds of submissions, researching titles and attending other screenings and festivals to bring you the best in contemporary independent Asian cinema from all over the world.

Reel Asian is especially proud to welcome a record number of artists to this year’s festival, with guests from as far away as Beijing, Hong Kong, Thailand, California and New York joining local directors to watch each other’s work and meet with Toronto fans of Asian cinema and culture. As our reputation and audience numbers grow, our challenge has been to maintain our identity as a community-based festival where audiences, artists and festival organizers can have a genuine exchange of ideas and get to know one another throughout the course of the festival. I sincerely hope that all of you will help to uphold Reel Asian’s reputation as Toronto’s Best Small Festival, which has as much to do with the special energy our audiences bring to the festival as it does our programming.

At the start of every planning cycle, the festival exists only as a crazy idea. Throughout the year, I have the honour and privilege of working with some very talented and dedicated people, many who volunteer their time, energy and skills, or donate the money, goods or services required to make Reel Asian a reality. At some point while you’re going through this programme guide to have a look at all the wonderful events that are going on, I ask that you take a few moments to give your attention to the Masthead, Thank You’s and the Sponsors’ section. Without the individuals, organizations and companies listed there, Reel Asian as you know it just simply would not happen. And since we’re not able to include the names of all the volunteers you’ll be encountering over the course of the next five days, I would also like to take this opportunity to acknowledge their vital contribution to the success of the festival.

I look very much forward to joining you at the screenings and other events and hope that you will enjoy yourselves as much as all of us at Reel Asian have enjoyed putting it all together for you!

Sally Lee, Executive Director

MESSAGE FROM THE PROGRAMMER

A colleague once made an off-the-cuff remark that Toronto is plagued with too many film festivals. The comment caught me off guard. Granted, any film aficionado could easily be kept busy year-round, doing nothing more than jump from one film festival to the next, but “plagued”? “Too many”? Preposterous! How could there be too much of something entirely dedicated to bringing movies from remote parts of the world – some never to be seen again in Toronto – on the big screen? Let’s face it: If there is an audience for a particular film festival, regardless of whether the event is culturally or politically motivated, then its importance cannot be so easily dismissed.

Reel Asian is but one of Toronto’s many smaller film festivals that could … and that did. Since its inception, the festival has successfully built a solid base audience that, year after year, has been exposed to engaging films exploring Asian culture, identity, and the idea of “Asian-ness.” Which brings us to some of the challenges that come with programming for Reel Asian: With hundreds of new independent works from North America, Asia, and the rest of the world that see the light every year, how does a programmer select a mere 54 films to fill a five-day festival? Should a film made by a local Asian filmmaker be considered when there is no Asian content per se? How does one strike a perfect balance between cutting-edge experimental videos, emotional dramas, art cinema, and campy fun movies, while keeping in mind the original mandate of introducing and supporting North American Asian filmmakers? These are some of the many questions that the Screening Committee and I have wrestled with in the past few months during the process of putting together this year’s programme. My first thanks, then, must go to the Screening Committee for their critical feedback and for sifting through hundreds of submissions; to local and international friends and colleagues for their indispensable advice; and to both of my Reel Asian colleagues, Sally Lee and Grace Bai, for their patience, support, and understanding.

For the past seven years, Reel Asian has aimed to challenge, educate, provoke, and, quite simply, entertain its audience. This is a tradition we strive to keep alive. We hope that this year’s festival will be no exception. A film festival defines its audience as much as the audience defines it. In other words, this is your festival as much as it is ours. Enjoy, engage, and experience …

Stephen Lan, Programmer
The National Film Board of Canada is proud to support the Toronto Reel Asian International Film Festival and to sponsor the Award for Best Independent Canadian Film or Video.

The NFB is 65 years young this year. More than ever, our doors are open to new talent from across Canada.

We’re proud to work with the Toronto Reel Asian International Film Festival to promote culturally diverse filmmaking. As Canada’s public film producer and distributor, we feel a special responsibility to reach out to new and emerging directors and to help break down barriers that visible minority filmmakers face as they strive to take their place in Canada’s audiovisual landscape.

We’re also delighted to have the Toronto Reel Asian International Film Festival back at our wonderful Mediatheque, located in the heart of Toronto’s bustling arts and entertainment district. The Mediatheque offers visitors a personalized cinema experience and a window into Canadian culture and history. I hope you’ll continue to visit us throughout the year and take part in our one-of-a-kind workshops, screenings, lectures … and much, much more!

CHRIS GEHMAN is an independent filmmaker, curator and critic living in Toronto. He was the Artistic Director of the Images Festival from 2000-2004 and an assistant programmer and program guide editor at Cinematheque Ontario. His writing has appeared in Cinema Scope, Take One, Millenium Film Journal, Broken Pencil, and his films have screened at numerous venues around the world.

NAIKO KUMAGAI is a publicity coordinator at the Toronto International Film Festival Group, where she proudly lives and breathes Canadian film. She was formerly a journalist for the Canadian Press in Vancouver.

MYROCIA WATAMANIUK has programmed and hosted industry sessions for the Toronto International Film Festival, served as Programmer and Programming Manager for Canadian Film Centre’s Worldwide Short Film Festival and as Associate Programmer for Hot Docs Canadian International Documentary Festival. She also produced CBC Newsworld’s leading current affairs debate program, “counterSpin” and currently hosts Rogers Television daily live morning show “Daytime Toronto.”
I AM ASIAN, HEAR ME ROAR

What does it mean to be an independent Asian filmmaker in North America? Should issues of cultural identity be the focus of a North American Asian filmmaker? Must one be restricted to using only Asian actors? The answer is: absolutely, yes, no, maybe, and not at all! For its Opening Night, Reel Asian has put together a funny and wildly entertaining programme of shorts from young talent emerging from Canada and the U.S. [CONTINUED ON NEXT PAGE]

KATA PRACTICE
SIU TA / CANADA / 2004 / VIDEO / 4 MIN. / B&W
WORLD PREMIERE / DIRECTOR IN ATTENDANCE

Young David likes to practice his karate moves. In fact, it’s his best defense against domestic trouble. But sometimes, not even the best of moves can block life’s problems…

Siu Ta graduated from the University of Toronto with an honours BA in Drama and History and spent two years at George Brown Theatre School in the acting department. Siu currently stars in the new critically acclaimed drama series “This is Wonderland.”

HITTING ZERO
DARLENE LIM / CANADA / 2004 / VIDEO / 18 MIN. / COLOR / DIRECTOR IN ATTENDANCE

Four friends, four stories, one dilemma. Forget about the finish line; Trevor, Elaine, Mark and Melissa just want to get to the starting mark. Hitting Zero is a comical look at the small tragedies of life encountered on the way to achieving the goals we strive for.

AWARDS AND SELECTED SCREENINGS: WINNER, NSI ZED DRAMA PRIZE 2002; 2003 VANCOUVER INTERNATIONAL FILM FESTIVAL

Darlene Lim is an Honours graduate of Ryerson University’s Film Studies program. She has worked as an Associate Producer on the popular CBC television series “Street Cents.” She makes her professional directorial debut with “Hitting Zero.”

DRAGON OF LOVE
DOAN LA / USA / 2003 / VIDEO / 11 MIN. / COLOR / CANADIAN PREMIERE

Joel is a ladies’ man – or so he likes to think. He fantasizes about meeting a beautiful Black woman until one evening it happens: Sally is the woman of his dreams. Their eyes connect and love, or rather lust, ensues. But Sally has some interesting plans for her new boy toy…

AWARDS: BEST SHORT FILM, 2003 HAWAII INTERNATIONAL FILM FESTIVAL

Doan La has written, directed, and produced over 21 short films, which have screened at numerous film festivals and garnered awards. He currently studies Film Directing at the UCLA Graduate School of Film, Theatre, and Television, and works in Los Angeles as a film editor.

SHAOLIN SISTERS
MISHANN LAU / CANADA / 2004 / VIDEO / 5 MIN. / B&W
WORLD PREMIERE / DIRECTOR IN ATTENDANCE

Like any other siblings, Mei Lein and Mei San often fight and bicker. Unlike any other siblings, these two Asian sistahs kick and punch out their differences in a dramatic kung-fu showdown.

Mishann Lau is an award-winning sound editor who likes to take pictures and make movies in between sound jobs. Wasted on action-porno double-bills, Mishann loves horror movies, kung-fu flicks and cheesy soft-porn. Her passions include twiddling knobs, talking shop and martial arts. She is currently working on a sci-fi short, a ghost-story feature and a documentary.

BICYCLES AND RADIOS
O. NATHAPON / USA / 2004 / VIDEO / 35 MIN. / COLOR / CANADIAN PREMIERE

Set in a small village in Thailand, Bicycles and Radios is the beautiful story of two people brought together by fate and the tragedy of losing a parent. Dao and Nop have never met, yet support and understand each other like no one else can – all through a popular radio talk show. One day, they decide to share their feelings about each other over the airwaves… Sumptuously shot and beautifully crafted, Bicycles and Radios marks the debut of a promising new talent.

O. Nathapon was born in Thailand and moved to England at age 14, returning to Thailand to study acting. In 2000, he moved to Pasadena to attend the Art Centre College of Design, from which he has recently graduated. He is currently working on a feature-length screenplay. “Bicycles and Radios” is his first film.
I AM ASIAN, HEAR ME ROAR [CONTINUED FROM PREVIOUS PAGE]

These filmmakers are first or second-generation North American Asian, and their stories are as eclectic as they are. Some riff on stereotypical images of Asian culture to produce hilarious personal diaries or short dramas. Others are interested in telling beautiful stories, pure and simple. Cultural identity aside, North American Asian filmmakers make some great films. Only one thing ties the seven shorts in this programme together: they are an absolute blast!

LILO & ME
KIP FULBECK / USA / 2003 / VIDEO / 10 MIN. / COLOR
TORONTO PREMIERE / DIRECTOR IN ATTENDANCE
What celebrity do you most resemble? Hapa artist Kip Fulbeck documents his uncanny resemblance to Pocahontas, Mulan, Aladdin, and other “ethnically ambiguous” animated characters. Both hilarious and touching, this video examines the muting of race in mainstream media and its effects on multiracial Americans.

As the world’s foremost artist exploring Hapa identity, Kip Fulbeck has performed and also exhibited his award-winning videos in over 20 countries and throughout the U.S. Currently a Professor and Chair of Art at the University of California, Kip authored the critically acclaimed novel “Paper Bullets: A Fictional Autobiography.” His new book entitled “HAPA” features portraits of multiracials of Asian/Pacific Islander descent.

JUST SMILE AND NOD
KATIE YU / CANADA / 2003 / VIDEO / 9 MIN. / COLOR
TORONTO PREMIERE / DIRECTOR IN ATTENDANCE
10-year-old Matt dislikes visiting his Chinese grandpa because of the language barrier. To him, Grandpa is an old-fashioned traditionalist who “doesn’t even own a computer.” One day, Matt is stuck with dropping in on Grandpa for his birthday. But when the turntables are turned up, groovy Grandpa reveals his true self and it’s Matt who can’t keep up!

Katie is a graduate of the University of British Columbia’s Film & Television Studies Program. “Just Smile and Nod,” a CBC Mix Flicks winner in 2003, marks Katie’s directorial debut. She is currently developing a feature-length script.

DRUM MACHINE

By tokyoplastic

A group of adorable Japanese dolls bang their heads on drums to create a beautiful harmony. But beware of the evil black flower ... Drum Machine was the audience award winner for Animation at the 2004 Sundance Online Film Festival.

In 2002 industrial and game designer DC abandoned all worldly ties to follow the path of digital enlightenment. With the creation of tokyoplastic he entered the seventh circle of wisdom and, following certain auspicious signs, united with the international photographer and artist LJ. Together, using a secret technique developed in their underground laboratory, these vector scientists concoct mind-burning online experiences. Soon they will have occupied an area of the Internet the size of North America.

LAPTOPS & MARTINIS (“PUNTO ZERO”)

By Motomichi Nakamura

A hyperkinetic piece starring a one-eyed monster, all set to the heavy beats of Miami-based electronic artist Otto von Schirach.

Motomichi Nakamura was born and raised in Japan, has lived in the US and Ecuador, and currently works as an animator/digital artist in New York City where he produces music videos for electronic musicians. His animation work has been showcased at the Beaubourg Contemporary Art Centre, the Galleria Civica di Arte Contemporanea, the Sundance Online Film Festival, and at the Viper Digital Film Festival, among others. Additionally, as VJ Moto – Japones Hasta a la Madre, Motomichi currently performs a live VJ act for audiences, which includes animated characters superimposed on scenes taped from Latin American streets. VJ Moto will provide live visuals at Reel Asian’s Opening Night Party.

Girls just wanna have fun. And score a perfect 300 at bowling! At least that’s the one fixation preventing 23-year-old Reva from enjoying life as she should be. Reva’s cute, charming, fun, and intelligent. Yet she’s entirely given up on boys and dating because of her unwavering obsession with a perfect bowling score and the desire to beat the mysterious Ronnie Potts – the only bowler to have achieved this feat. Thankfully, Reva is surrounded by supportive (though very catty!) girlfriends who are determined to bring Reva back to her senses. As if!

SELECTED SCREENINGS:
- 2004 Chicago Asian American Film Festival
- 2003 New York International Indie Film Festival

Directors Sara and Cecilia Hyoun grew up in Silver Spring, Maryland, addicted to John Hughes movies and Pez. Convinced that the characters of “The Breakfast Club” would make great Pez dispensers, they moved to Los Angeles to realize their dream. Unfortunately, Hughes could not be found (he lives in Chicago) and apparently had no interest in tapping the Pez market. Disillusioned, their attentions turned to Altoids instead, which lured them into the dark, dank world of post-production. The good sister fell in love with editing while the bad sister succumbed to the corner of the cutting room plotting ways to brainwash the American public. Together they plan on saving the world. Or at least make another movie.

In terms of design, colour plays a significant role. It has strong abilities in setting the mood of your design and enhancing the atmosphere. It is important to remember many elements affect colour in a printed piece. Ink absorbs light, so the thicker your ink; the darker your colours will appear. Stocks also absorb and affect coloured inks. Therefore choosing the appropriate paper is as important as the design.
Shot over three months, Secondary School chronicles day-to-day life at two prestigious and well-respected secondary schools in Hong Kong, one for boys and one for girls. Known for being highly competitive and performance-oriented, the Hong Kong education system has been undergoing various reforms for more than 15 years. Today, education reform remains one of the city’s most controversial issues. Secondary School observes the Hong Kong school system at close-range by focusing on the contents and methods of teaching in addition to students’ outlook on life.

Secondary School became the first documentary to obtain a theatrical release in Hong Kong. Deemed controversial, the film screened for six months and stirred up a heated debate on the country’s education system.

Director Tammy Cheung will participate in the special discussion forum “In Conversation with… Tammy Cheung” on Sunday, November 28, 4:15 pm, at Innis Town Hall. The forum will be moderated by Karen Tisch. Please refer to page 37 in the programme guide for further details.

Born in Shanghai and raised in Hong Kong, Tammy Cheung studied Sociology in Hong Kong, and Cinema at Concordia University. Influenced by American filmmaker Frederick Wiseman, she employs an observational, non-intrusive approach characteristic of Wiseman’s Direct Cinema style.

THE ADVENTURE OF IRON PUSSY

APICHATPONG WERARATHEKUL AND MICHAEL SHAWWANASAI
THAILAND / 2003 / VIDEO / 90 MIN. / COLOR / TORONTO PREMIERE
CO-DIRECTOR/LEAD ACTOR MICHAEL SHAWWANASAI IN ATTENDANCE

Villains of the world, beware! Iron Pussy is one kitty with sharp claws and a mean high kick! By day, he’s just another taciturn employee at the local corner store. But when duty calls, this secret agent dons a black wig, slips into a vinyl catsuit and metamorphoses into … Iron Pussy (played by co-director Michael Shaowanasai himself!). The most hardened thug is no match for this pussy’s seductive games. The undercover agent’s latest mission: to infiltrate the mansion of socialite Madam Pompidoy and investigate a secret cache of illegal money. Disguised as a sultry maid, Iron Pussy is ready to pounce on a few bad guys. Alas, her cunning plans are complicated when she meets Madam Pompidoy’s son and unexpected love sparks fly …

Pure camp aficionados rejoice! This film has it all: over-the-top melodrama, a climactic fiery battle to the death, rolling plastic rocks, incestuous longings, and characters breaking into song-and-dance routines.

Apichatpong Weerasethakul is one of the few filmmakers in Thailand who has worked outside the strict Thai studio system. His films experiment with elements found in the dramatic plot structure of Thai television and radio programs, comics, and old Thai films. In addition, Weerasethakul’s use of non-professional actors and improvised dialogue works to blur the shifting boundaries between documentary and fiction. His first feature “Mysterious Object At Noon” screened at Reel Asian 2002.

FILMOGRAPHY: TROPICAL MALADY (2004); JURY PRIZE WINNER AT CANNES 2004; THE ADVENTURE OF IRON PUSSY (2003); BLISSFULLY YOURS (2002); MYSTERIOUS OBJECT AT NOON (2000)

Michael Shaowanasai is a multimedia artist who works in installation, performance, photography, film and video. He has participated in several international art exhibitions including the Tirana Biennale (2001), the Guang Ju Biennale (2002), and the Venice Biennale (2003)

PETER CHANTHANAKONE / CANADA / 2004 / DVD / 9 MIN. / COLOR / WORLD PREMIERE
Since 1975, many Laotians have died while fleeing to Thailand through the Mekong River. Through the use of text and the voices of his parents, Peter Chanthanakone shares the powerful story of the couple's own escape and the dangers they faced.

Peter Chanthanakone obtained his BFA at McMaster University and is currently studying for his MFA at the Academy of Art University in San Francisco in 3D Animation.

A woman struggles with the emptiness of her life. Her emotional landscape is reflected in the images around her, creating something mysteriously sensual and deeply emotional.

Born and raised in Japan, Naoko Sasaki moved to Canada in 1989 where she went on to study media arts at the Emily Carr Institute of Art and Design.

Through ink paintbrush and scratches on the film footage, the filmmaker literally draws a connection between Chinese calligraphy and birds, and between his Chinese heritage and his now North American identity.

Luo Li was born in China and is currently studying film production at York University in Toronto. His first film “Stills,” included in the Asians Gone Wild programme, has also been shown in China and Mexico.

LOST IN TRANSLITERATION
Transliteration – the representation or spelling in the closest corresponding letters of a different alphabet or language (e.g. is it “Chang” or “Zhang”). With this in mind, what happens to the identity of new immigrants coming to Canada? Six Canadian filmmakers of various generations and cultural backgrounds share personal stories, simple observations and overall sentiments of people’s journeys – their own or others like them. The shared feeling is one of loss of the original essence of something, a sense of acute displacement, and a desire to accurately represent or be represented.

Pomegranate

Xu Yiliang / 2003 / China / Video / 28 min. / Color / World Premiere

Old man Lao Tan is coming to terms with the death of his wife. After his stepdaughter brings her own father to the city to look after him, the two men gradually open up, with one confessing to the other a secret surrounding the old man’s deceased wife. While clearly a low-budget piece, the rigor in tone, pacing, and mise-en-scene of Pomegranate marks an auspicious start for this young filmmaker.

Xu Yiliang was born in the Jiangsu province of China in 1980. She recently graduated from the Central Drama Academy with a Major in Television Arts, and is currently pursuing further studies in film directing at the Beijing Film Academy.

A Summer in an Ancient City

Pang Shan / 2003 / China / Video / 23 min. / Color / World Premiere

A classic tale of guilt and redemption. Chen Jun spends his summer days serving local customers at a food stall. One day, while serving a young girl, he notices another customer stealing her money. Too cowardly to act, he watches silently while the petty thief and his unsuspected victim go in opposite directions, leaving the young boy full of remorse. Fate, however, brings Chen Jun and the thief together once again. This time, the boy won’t let him get away with it …

Peng Shan was born in Sichuan province of China in 1981 and is currently studying at the Mei Shi Film Academy of Chongqing University.

The Missing House

Ying Liang / 2003 / China / Video / 28 min. / Color / World Premiere

Chen Jun is temporarily discharged from a correctional facility and allowed to return to his hometown. Far from a warm welcome, he discovers instead that since his father’s death his family home has been torn down and replaced by a hotel. In the streets outside, animosity lurks at every corner. Reminiscent of the themes of urban alienation found in the films of Tsai Ming-liang, The Missing House is an arresting piece with a socio-political message that resonates long after the credits roll.

Selected screenings:

Welcome to Destination Shanghai

Welcome to the “new” New Chinese Cinema — a kind of digital cinema that is dramatically shifting away from both the poetic rigor of the Fifth Generation and the loose fluidity of the Sixth Generation. Welcome instead to something more raw in form that revels in the post-digital, low-budget revolution. In the director’s own words, Welcome To Destination Shanghai is about “a male prostitute, a female prostitute, a mother, a father, a son, a puppy, a guard, a procuress, a doctor, a presenter, a small town and a big city. They mirror and smash together into a destination called Shanghai.” No matter; conventional plot is less of a concern here than the film’s central message, relayed through a series of interconnected tableaux in which contemporary China’s urban jungle embodies a melancholy and alienation not unlike that of the Western world. This is unlike anything we’ve witnessed before in Chinese cinema. Welcome, then, to a vibrant new chapter in East Asian film history to be discovered and embraced.

AWARDS AND SELECTED SCREENINGS: FIPRESCI Award, International Film Festival Rotterdam 2003; 2003 Vancouver International Film Festival

Andrew Cheng was born in Shanghai in 1967. He studied literature in Beijing and film at the University of Sydney after which he began working as a director for television and MTV in Shanghai and Australia. “Welcome To Destination Shanghai” is his second feature after “Shanghai Panic” (2002).

CHINESE RESTAURANTS: ON THE ISLANDS
CHEUK KWAN / CANADA / 2004 / VIDEO / 78 MIN. / COLOR
TORONTO PREMIERE / FILMMAKERS IN ATTENDANCE
Part two of Cheuk Kwan’s 13-episode Chinese Restaurant series (detailed info on this fascinating project can be found to the right), On The Islands follows Asian families and culture in three countries: Mauritius, Trinidad and Tobago, and Cuba.

MAURITIUS
In the middle of the Indian Ocean sits Chez Manuel, a restaurant run by the owner’s wife Colette. In Colette we discover an innovative self-taught chef who serves up inventive new dishes combining Hakka Chinese, Creole and Indian flavors. Colette and Manuel, together with other members of the Hakka Chinese community, give us insights into the Hakka Chinese and their conservative traditions and values.

TRINIDAD AND TOBAGO
In the hills of San Fernando is Soong’s Great Wall, the most famous Chinese restaurant on the island. This segment tells the rags-to-riches story of owner Maurice Soong whose passion for quality and service has won him widespread affection and respect. As they dance to the infectious calypso music of the island’s annual Carnival, members of the Soong family reflect on how their assimilation and personal choices will affect Maurice’s beloved restaurant.

CUBA
In Havana’s Barrio Chino, the Lung Kong is a charitable clan association run by Alejandro Chiu. The association also runs a home for Chinese elderly and supports itself by operating a Chinese restaurant on the side. Back in Chinatown, we go beyond the “Chinese Fantasy” created by the Cuban government to discover the legacy of a community that dates back to 1847 and has now become truly Cuban.

IN CONVERSATION WITH … CHEUK KWAN AND KWOI GIN
CHEUK KWAN was born in Hong Kong and grew up in Singapore, Hong Kong and Japan. After earning his master’s degree in systems engineering in the U.S., he immigrated to Canada in 1976 where he embarked upon a successful career in information technology. In 1978 the community activist founded The Asianadian, a magazine dedicated to the promotion of Asian Canadian arts, culture and politics and the following year, helped lead a nation-wide fight for equality for Chinese Canadians. In 1995 Kwan joined the Harmony Movement, a national, non-profit organization dedicated to fostering harmony and diversity in Canada through public education. Kwan studied film at New York University in 1998 before establishing his own production company, Tissa Films.

KWOI GIN has worked with a diverse and eclectic pool of artists ranging from Bruce MacDonald, Jim Jarmusch to Jackie Chan. He was a close collaborator on Cheuk Kwan’s “Chinese Restaurant” series as the project’s cinematographer.

RICHARD FUNG is a Toronto-based video artist and writer. His tapes include “My Mother’s Place,” “Sea In The Blood,” and “Islands.” He is co-author of “13: Conversations on Art and Cultural Race Politics,” and has been published in numerous journals and anthologies. A winner of the Bell Canada Award for Video and the Toronto Arts Award for Media Art, Fung is an associate professor in the Integrated Media program at the Ontario College of Art and Design.
The name South of the Clouds, which comes from a place in Yunnan (located in southwest China), evokes a sense of remoteness and mystery. Fittingly, Zhu Wen’s film is a superbly mature and delicately crafted piece that tackles head on the theme of regret. In his heart, Xu had always belonged in Yunnan. However, in his youth Xu’s love for a girl pulled him away from the opportunities of Yunnan into what has since become a bleak marriage in Northern China. Leaving his many years of misery behind, the middle-aged man packs up his bags and embarks on a journey back to where he truly belongs. But the road to paradise is one littered with difficulties. When Xu unwittingly gets involved in a complicated scam involving a prostitute, he finds himself placed in police custody. Can his persistence in achieving personal happiness overcome the many barriers that stand in his way?

Zhu Wen riffs on a familiar adage; yet South of the Clouds is far from simplistic or straightforward. Take, for instance, the film’s unpredictable stylistic turn into a Bunuelian landscape. Through a psychologically complex main character, Zhu Wen draws on the many secret desires seated deep within us and awakens the courage to simply pursue.

AWARDS AND SELECTED SCREENINGS: NETPAC PRIZE, 2004 BERLIN INTERNATIONAL FILM FESTIVAL; 2003 VANCOUVER INTERNATIONAL FILM FESTIVAL

Zhu Wen graduated from the Energy Department of Southeastern University in 1989 and joined a factory as an engineer. However, he soon left to devote himself to literature. Since 1994 he has published four anthologies of short stories, a collection of poetry and a novel. He co-wrote the scripts for Zhang Ming’s “Rain Clouds Over Wushan” and Zhang Yuan’s “Seventeen Years.”

July
TAMMY CHEUNG / HONG KONG / 2004 / VIDEO / 80 MIN. / COLOR
DIRECTOR IN ATTENDANCE
July 1, 2003 marked the sixth anniversary of Hong Kong’s reunification with China. Led by a coalition of democratic groups, a massive and unprecedented public demonstration was called to protest the enactment of the national security law under Article 23 of the basic law, which would repress freedom of press and speech. Documenting the speeches, songs, chants, posters, and banners, as well as the atmosphere, July unequivocally shows individual and mass reactions to the proposed national security legislation: the anger, frustration, and elation when people become united. As in her previous film, Secondary School (also shown at Reel Asian this year), Tammy Cheung follows and intercuts two separate streams. Here, she juxtaposes two massive rallies with radically opposing purposes: one celebrating the anniversary with musical shows and colorful banners, the other defiantly opposing it with heartfelt passion – all taking place simultaneously in the same park. July is a record of events that could not occur anywhere else in China.

Tammy Cheung will participate in the special discussion forum “In Conversation with … Tammy Cheung” on Sunday, November 28, 4:15 pm, at Innis Town Hall. Please refer to page 37 in the programme guide for further details.

Born in Shanghai and raised in Hong Kong, Tammy Cheung studied in Hong Kong and Cinema at Concordia University. Influenced by American filmmaker Frederick Wiseman, she employs an observational, non-intrusive approach characteristic of Wiseman’s Direct Cinema style.
ASIANS GONE WILD

SELECTED SCREENINGS: 2004 SUNDANCE FILM FESTIVAL, 2003 YUBARI INTERNATIONAL FANTASTIC FILM FESTIVAL
Hirofumi Nagaike was born in Japan in 1975. In addition to being a director, he also works as a cinematographer and illustrator.
Recent films hailing from the Far East such as Thailand’s The Eye and Japan’s Ju-On and Ringu have contributed to the wave of Asian horror films that has washed over international critics and the general public alike (Hollywood’s remakes of Ringu as The Ring and Ju-On as The Grudge are undeniable proof of the genre’s sudden wide appeal). A Tale Of Two Sisters is the South Korean cousin of this twisted, eerie family of films. Two teenage sisters return to their Gothic countryside home, after being treated in a mental clinic following their mother’s death. They receive a frigid welcome, both from their father who remains emotionally distant, and from their stepmother who mistreats them. But this is the least of the sisters’ worries: an ominous presence in the house manifests itself, determined to expose the truth of their mother’s horrible demise. The blood-drenched dance of death is about to begin …

A Tale Of Two Sisters is one of the most immaculately crafted films in recent Asian horror history: Combining a lush, textured visual style and exceptional sound design, Ji-Woon Kim has created a tightly-knit, suffocating world offering little respite: the tranquil countryside home soon becomes a place of sheer terror. Be forewarned: you’ll never look at wallpaper the same way again …

Ji-Woon Kim was born in Seoul in 1964. He began his career as a stage actor and director before becoming a film director, acclaimed both in South Korea and internationally. Not only have his films been showcased at some of the world’s most prestigious film festivals, but they have also become box office sensations in Korea. “A Tale Of Two Sisters” was the third highest grossing film in Korea in 2003.

First Morning

Director: Victor Vu

Country: USA

Duration: 90 minutes

Language: English

Synopsis:

First Morning is a powerful and emotional drama about the Vietnamese “boat people” who fled their homeland in 1975 after the fall of Saigon. Rather than taking a strict socio-political approach, director Victor Vu chooses instead to focus on the pain and psychological scars endured by some of the nearly one million Vietnamese who took to the sea in rickety boats almost 20 years ago. This touching story unfolds through the eyes and memories of the Nguyen family, now living in Southern California.

During the fall of Saigon, young Tuan and his father were forced to flee Vietnam, leaving behind Tuan’s mother and sister Linh. While father and son settled into their new lives in America, years passed as mother and daughter transferred from one refugee camp to another across Southeast Asia. What happened during this time remains unspoken.

Years later, a chance encounter between Tuan and his mother reunites the family. But no one will talk about the family’s traumatic past or what has become of the missing sister he barely remembers. Gradually, the layers of silence accumulated over the years begin peeling away to reveal untold tragedies and pain.

Victor Vu was born and raised in America. His parents left Vietnam in 1975, just days before the fall of Saigon. In 1997, he received his Bachelor of Arts degree from Loyola Marymount University, where he studied production. “First Morning” is his first feature film.
Ngau Tau Kok Estate is one of the oldest and largest public housing projects in Hong Kong. Since the government announced its plan to re-develop the area in 2001, residents have been gradually relocated to new housing estates. Following two social workers who provide services and emotional support to the residents as they deal with the relocation, Moving offers a glimpse into the lives of a number of impoverished elderly people. This is an emotional group portrait of the parents and grandparents who once helped establish the foundation of Hong Kong, but are now left forgotten and neglected.

Tammy Cheung will participate in the special discussion forum "In Conversation with ... Tammy Cheung" on Sunday, November 28, 4:15 pm, at Innis Town Hall. Please see right for further details.
As part of its goal to support new talent from the local Asian community, the Toronto Reel Asian International Film Festival recently joined together with the Liaison of Independent Filmmakers of Toronto to support the creation of works by the following four young, emerging Asian directors. Three of them will be screened at this year’s festival. These works were all made as part of a workshop offered by LIFT, with participation co-sponsored by Reel Asian. Thanks to LIFT for its ongoing support of Reel Asian and Asian filmmakers.

Move over, Zatoichi, here comes Azumi! Don’t be fooled by the ultra-short skirt, knee-high boots, and flowing black cape. Behind the angelic façade and streaming locks, gleams a sword-killing machine who doesn’t think twice before setting on a bloody rampage. Tarantino’s Bride wouldn’t stand a chance. Sequestered at a young age on a remote island, Azumi and nine other children have grown into robust teenagers having perfected the fine art of the Japanese sword. However, before sending them out into the world to perform the task they’d trained so long for, their master has one final test: they must kill each other. Shocked yet unable to disobey direct orders, Azumi and her friends brandish their swords at each other. What follows echoes the horror and despair reminiscent of Kinji Fukasaku’s Battle Royale. With Azumi leading the way, the few survivors must fulfill their assigned mission: to hunt down and eliminate a list of mercenaries and warlords so that proper peace may be restored.

Azumi is filled with sumptuously choreographed swordfight sequences. And yes, the blood will flow. Yet, director Ryuhei Kitamura goes beyond the usual conventions of Japanese sword films. Through the character of Azumi, Kitamura offers a portrait of a complex and deeply wounded young girl torn between what she’s been taught and what she truly believes. Will she follow her heart and hang up her sword, or will she remain the ruthless assassin she has been trained to become?

Ryuhei Kitamura is one of Japan’s most popular cult directors. He attended the School of Visual Arts in Australia (where he made the acclaimed short film, “Exit”). Since then, he has specialized in action-packed horror films, including the Evil Dead-inspired worldwide hit “Versus.” Already a tremendous success in Japan, “Azumi” is Kitamura’s seventh film in as many years.
